Battle of TINCHEBRAI (106)

Robert of Normandy was defeated and imprisoned.

(1068-1135) HENRY I

King of England (1100-1135). The 4th son of William the Conqueror. In 1091 William Rufus and Robert took his possessions away from him and drove him into exile. When William Rufus was found dead, Henry at once went to England, seized the royal treasure, was crowned king and issued a charter of rights which was the basis of MAGNA CHARTA. He recalled ANSELME

Archbishop of Canterbury, and married MATILDA daughter of HARCOURT of Scotland, then greatly pleasing the Saxon people. Robert of Normandy made war upon his brother & Henry was obliged to surrender all his possessions in Normandy and pay a ransom to Robert in 1101. War broke out between them again in 1104 and they met at TENCHEBRAI in France, and Robert was defeated and held as a prisoner in CAEN. He could not stand his death. The killing of Robert's prisoners in France brought about fugitives were that there had much to do with the normalization of the peace in England and great trouble was taken in the reign of Henry & a woman of Saxons & Normans. Henry had his fortress on William
